Background	The Parent–Teacher Meeting (PTM) is an essential platform for fostering communication between the college and the parents of students. As students progress through higher education, regular interaction between teachers and parents becomes crucial for monitoring academic performance, attendance, discipline, and overall development.
Objective	i. To strengthen communication between parents and teachers regarding students’ academic progress. ii. To discuss students’ performance, attendance, discipline, and overall development. iii. To involve parents in identifying students’ strengths and areas needing improvement and address any concerns or difficulties faced by students in academics or college activities.
Conclusion	The Parent–Teacher Meeting concluded with a positive and collaborative interaction between parents and faculty members. The discussions provided valuable insights into students’ academic performance, behavioral development, and areas requiring further attention. Parents appreciated the transparent communication and expressed their willingness to support departmental initiatives for the betterment of their wards.
