Introduction:

The Department of Sociology organized a field visit to Veterinary Clinic Kavathe Mahankal on 2/02/2020. The primary objective of this visit was to provide students with a practical understanding of animal husbandry, veterinary care, and the sociological implications of human-animal relationships.

Objective of the Field Visit:

- 1. Understanding Animal Husbandry Practices: To familiarize students with the practices and principles of animal husbandry, including breeding, nutrition, and healthcare.
- 2. Exploring Veterinary Care: To observe veterinary procedures, medical interventions, and the role of veterinarians in ensuring the health and well-being of animals.
- 3. Sociological Implications: To analyze the social and cultural dimensions of human-animal relationships and the impact of animal husbandry practices on society.

Field Visit Details:

The field visit team, comprised of students from the department of sociology, departed from the college campus on 25/02/2020. Veterinary Clinic Kavathe Mahankal Upon reaching, we were welcomed by the veterinary staff, who provided valuable insights into the world of animal care and husbandry.

Observations:

1. Animal Husbandry Practices:

- Witnessed various aspects of animal husbandry, including breeding techniques, feeding practices, and the overall management of livestock.
- Explored the role of technology and modern methods in enhancing productivity and ensuring animal welfare.

2. Veterinary Care and Medical Interventions:

- Observed veterinary procedures, medical examinations, and treatments administered to animals.
- Engaged in discussions with veterinarians about the challenges they face, ethical considerations, and the importance of preventive healthcare.

3. Human-Animal Relationships:

- Explored the cultural and societal dimensions of human-animal relationships, including the role of animals in agriculture, economy, and traditional practices.
- Discussed the impact of urbanization and changing lifestyles on the way humans interact with animals.

4. Community Engagement:

- Interacted with local farmers, animal caretakers, and community members to understand their perspectives on the significance of animal husbandry in their livelihoods.
- Discussed the social and economic implications of veterinary services on rural communities.

Challenges Identified:

- 1. Access to Veterinary Services: Limited access to veterinary care in certain rural areas, impacting the health of livestock and the livelihoods of farmers.
- 2. Awareness and Education: Lack of awareness among some community members about modern animal husbandry practices and the importance of veterinary care.
- 3. Economic Constraints: Financial constraints affecting the ability of some farmers to invest in proper animal husbandry practices and healthcare.

Recommendations:

- 1. Mobile Veterinary Clinics: Implement mobile veterinary clinics to reach remote areas, providing essential healthcare services to livestock in need.
- 2. Community Outreach and Education: Conduct awareness programs and workshops to educate farmers and community members about modern and sustainable animal husbandry practices.
- 3. Financial Support: Explore avenues for financial support or subsidies to assist farmers in adopting improved animal husbandry practices and accessing veterinary services.

Conclusion:

The field visit to Veterinary Clinic Kavathe Mahankal offered students a unique perspective on the intricate relationship between humans and animals. The experience enhanced their understanding of the societal, economic, and cultural dimensions of animal husbandry, emphasizing the importance of responsible practices and veterinary care.

Acknowledgments:

We extend our gratitude to the staff at [Veterinary Clinic/Farm Name] for their warm hospitality and insightful discussions that enriched the learning experience for our students.
