Background	The department has recognized the importance of community engagement and experiential learning opportunities for students. In line with this vision, an inaugural function of an activity called "Reading for the Community" has been organized. This activity allows students to go out into their neighbourhoods and read social narratives or stories to community members. By doing so, students can not only improve their reading skills but also build connections with their community and gain a deeper understanding of social issues.
Objective	<ol style="list-style-type: none">1. To promote literacy and reading among both students and community members.2. To facilitate meaningful interactions and connections between students and their neighbourhoods.3. To provide students with a practical and hands-on learning experience outside the classroom.
Conclusion	The inaugural function of "Reading for the Community" was a resounding success, with students embracing the opportunity to connect with their neighbours through storytelling. By sharing social narratives with community members, students were able to initiate dialogues about important social issues and contribute to a sense of unity within their neighbourhoods. Moving forward, this activity has the potential to become a regular part of the department's experiential learning initiatives, fostering a strong bond between students and their communities while promoting the joy of reading and social awareness
